

Jennie McHattie

I spent my teen years in London and then went abroad. I got married in Angola and after a couple of years in Nigeria returned to England and settled in Portsmouth where my two daughters and grandchildren still live.

Whilst there I did secretarial work for the Archdeacon of Chichester and the Vicars of three different parishes (one of whom became the Chaplain to Betty Boothroyd) as well as having my own business.

I came here to look after my mother and stayed. I like 'traditional' services in old churches and dislike modern ones, so am quite happy with English Bicknor.
